

Stand firm for your

OLYMPIC AWARD

Your union representatives have been locked in talks with London's bus operators for four days this week.

We are making progress, but there is still some way to go and we're not taking anything for granted.

Talks have adjourned today (Friday, 6 July) but your union will be seeking further improvements over the weekend in anticipation of a final offer on Monday.

Unite will then hold a meeting with all union representatives the following day on Tuesday to report back and in turn update members in garages across London on Wednesday and Thursday next week.

As bus workers you are more unified now than ever. So we urge you to continue to stand firm, shoulder-to-shoulder, as your union fights for a fair deal for your contribution to keep London moving over the Olympic Games.
